

TO ERECT TANK FOR 500,000 GALLONS IN GREEN LANE AREA

Council Votes to Provide Additional Storage Upon Recommendation Of Engineers

TO COST ABOUT $50,000

Council Informed Project Can Be Financed Out of Water Department Revenues

Borough council last night unanimously voted to ask for bids for the erection of a 500,000 gallon water storage tank. The tank is to be located in the vicinity of Green Lane and Wilson avenue. Bids are to be asked for at once and the work is to be gotten under way at the earliest possible time.

The tank, according to plans will measure 51 feet in diameter; 37 feet below the water line in length and six feet above the water line. It will be 169 feet from the ground to the water line. It will rest on eight legs, mounted on concrete foundations, similar to the present tank at Pond and Mulberry streets. It will be fed through a riser five feet in diameter, 132 feet high. There will be approximately 300 cubic yards of concrete in the foundations. The estimated cost is between $45,000 and $50,000 and the project will be financed solely through the revenue of the water department.

The subject of the erection of the tank came before council last night when councilman Pfeiffer, chairman of water committee, presented the subject for consideration.

Councilman Pfeiffer informed council that "during the past five years the pumpage at the water pumping station has increased from 390,000,000 gallons in 1933, to an estimated pumpage of 650,000,000 gallons in 1937.

Mr. Pfeiffer stated that the water committee conferred with the borough engineer, John S. Roberts, Jr.; William H. Boardman, consulting engineer; and Mr. Goodhue, of the engineering department of the Philadelphia Suburban Underwriters Association. "As the result of these conferences it was deemed advisable for the borough to immediately erect in the vicinity of Green Lane and Wilson avenue, a 500,000 gallon tower and tank, approximately 175 feet high," informed Mr. Pfeiffer.

Mr. Pfeiffer said that his committee had discussed the matter with the public works and finance committees of council, and that the water committee had plans and specifications prepared in accordance with the recommendations of the three above named engineers.

Council recessed to study the plans of the engineers and Engineer Boardman briefly explained them. Mr. Boardman answered numerous questions informing the councilmen the only solution to the present situation was the erection of water storage, so that during period of peak demands, this supply could be drawn upon or else the laying of larger mains, which would be a costly proposition.

Edgely Group Attends Meeting of Borough Council

Borough council had an interested audience last night when a group of students of the fifth grade at Edgely school, attended the monthly session of Bristol Borough's legislative body. The six youngsters were accompanied by their teacher, Miss Bittinger and Mrs. Walter Rittler.

It appears that the children have organized their room into a municipality, having named streets and numerous other features. The room or municipality is governed by a burgess and town council and other duly elected officers.

The visitors came to council meeting last night to see how a regular town council operates and they were deeply impressed.

At the conclusion of the meeting the youngsters were greeted by Burgess Anderson, President Wagner and councilmen. They had the details of operation explained to them and Secretary Lefferts gave them an object lesson in keeping the minutes of the meetings.

'CHARLES ELLET, JR., ENGINEER AND PATRIOT' IS SUBJECT OF PAPER READ BY HUGH B. EASTBURN AT AUTUMN SESSION OF BUCKS CO. HISTORICAL SOCIETY

An Outstanding Leader in Pageant of Progress, Particularly in Transportation Field, Was Born in Log House in Falls Township, in January of 1810

The paper read by Hugh B. Eastburn at the Autumn meeting of Bucks County Historical Society, held at Walnut Grove Farms, Saturday afternoon, is herewith presented in full: "CHARLES ELLET, JR., ENGINEER AND PATRIOT"

By Hugh B. Eastburn

The first sixty years of the last century witnessed amazing developments in many fields but, particularly, in transportation. The pack-train, ox-cart, canoe and raft of the first settlers were supplanted by canal boat, steamboat and railroad. Broad streams were bridged. Iron-clad battle ships were first introduced during the civil war. The West was won and a new nation came into being.

An outstanding leader in this pageant of progress was born in a log house in Falls Township, Bucks County, January 1, 1810. His ability and achievements were not fully recognized during his life and have since been almost forgotten. It is now my privilege to tell you something of the life of Charles Ellet, Jr.

His father, a member of a substantial Quaker family, early settlers in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, was a Philadelphia hardware merchant, when he purchased a farm of 150 acres in "Pennsbury Manor" from Samuel Church, Jr., March 5, 1807, and established his family there. The farm lay South of Scott's Creek (called Wilson's Creek in the deed) and extended from the Bordentown Road to the River behind Mint Island. It is now a part of the large holdings of the Warner Company.

Ellet's mother was Mary Israel, daughter of Israel Israel, High Sheriff of Philadelphia, who had made a fortune in the Barbadoes. It is supposed he was of Swedish descent. He was a member of the Universalist Church, a Mason, and prominent in the business and political life of the city.

Mary Israel and Charles Ellet, Sr., were married October 8, 1801 and became the parents of fourteen children, of whom Charles, Jr., was the sixth.

Mary Israel Ellet, who lived to be over ninety, surviving nearly all of her children, wrote her autobiography in her 90th year. Covering the period from the close of the Revolution to five years after the Civil War, it is an absorbing story of an eventful, exciting and useful life. Time does not permit me to quote from it here, but I hope that some day it may be published and given the prominence it deserves. The Philadelphia Press for January 11, 1869 also contains more than a full page of her recollections of early Philadelphia.

Largely through Mary Ellet's intelligence and hard work, the Manor farm house was made comfortable and the farm productive. The children were educated at home, in Bristol and Philadelphia. The older children be-

GROUND ZEPPELIN PROVES BIG ATTRACTION

Payments of 100,000 Visitors In First 3 Weeks Exceeded Receipts of Ocean Trip

SOURCE OF INTEREST

By Pierre J. Huss

BERLIN, Oct. 12 — (INS) — Germany's remaining dirigible, the Graf Zeppelin, veteran transatlantic and round-the-world sky queen, in three weeks demonstrated a box-office value greater than the combined earnings on an ocean flight of herself and the ill-fated Hindenburg.

Cold stored in the Frankfurt main hangar after the Hindenburg disaster because it is considered impractical to rebuild her for helium gas, the Graf attracted 100,000 visitors at one mark per head the first three weeks after she was thrown open to public inspection.

It exceeds by far the amount of cash taken in on a payload of passengers and mail on any trip. The Graf covered more than a million miles since her maiden voyage in 1928 and in that time accommodated some 13,000 passengers. The flags of all countries she visited greet the rubbernecks as they file through the passenger quarters of the retired airship.

The Graf because of her numerous flights had acquired a passenger clientele whose faith seems unshaken in her, as can be assumed from the fact that two days after the Hindenburg tragedy only two cancellations in passengers booked on the Graf were received and fifteen new applications.

But a few steps away on the same field where the Graf is drawing crowds is rising rapidly the first outline of a second huge hangar, designed to house the LZ-130 after its completion next March in Friedrichshafen. From there it will leave for Lakehurst sometime in early May, a year after the Hindenburg crash.

Phila. Orchestra Opens The Musical Season

By Dr. Joseph Pasceri

The opening week of the symphonie concerts of the Philadelphia Orchestra is the beginning of the greatest event of the musical season of Philadelphia and its vicinity.

It is a great gift for us and a feast of the soul to be able to hear old, classic, romantic, modern and ultra-modern music that may be concerted and interpreted by the Philadelphia Orchestra.

I speak through personal experience which comes from the constant attendance to the Academy of Music and the Metropolitan Opera House, when that immense theatre was used for music since the year in which Carl Polig left with honor the direction of the splendid orchestra to Leopold Stokowski. Who, with the geniality, competence and fineness of intention and execution all his own, coupled with deep study and most arduous labor, infused new life in that stupendous musical body, making of it a perfect organism, as much as perfection is allowed to mortals, and one of the very first and best of the world.

In all these years I heard with delight the operas and the symphonie concerts in Philadelphia and often in New York. In the music I have found calm and recreation all the time. Literature, picture, sculpture in general and music in particular, and science with factive work of any kind are the things that I admire and love most, for it is in the beautiful arts, in science and in the conscient and useful labor of men that our spirit finds rest as to enjoy their noble accomplishments which near them to God.

The program of this first week was simply superb. The Prelude and Fugue of Bach in B Minor provided by Mr. Cailliet, a clarinet player in the orchestra, never heard here before, and Symphony No. 1 of Brahms in the first part of it, and the excerpts from "Siegfried" of Wagner in the second, were brilliantly interpreted with sincerity and beautiful effect, particularly in their dramatic points. The orchestra and the young maestro were in splendid form, and in my modest opinion, if Ormandy would use again the baton and his former manner of leading, it will give him more distinction and better pose. Why should he imitate Maestro Guerrieri, who was the first to lead without baton, and Stokowski who left it on account of certain affection in his arm? The ovations given to Ormandy and the orchestra at the end of each number and part of the program were well deserved.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Copyright, 1937, by The Baltimore Sun)

The "Purge" Is Off

THERE WERE a number of things about Mr. Roosevelt's recent trip to the West Coast of considerable significance, but one on which he is not likely to touch in his radio "report to the people" is the failure of the President to discover any militant popular sentiment in favor either of his defeated court-packing bill or in favor of punishing the Democratic Senators who helped defeat it.

NO CLAIM that such a sentiment exists is now made. On the contrary, there is complete unanimity among politicians and newspaper men who accompanied Mr. Roosevelt that there was an absence of interest in the President's court proposals and no feeling of resentment toward the aforesaid Senators. This, naturally, is particularly comforting to the nine Democratic Senators who must run for re-nomination in the spring and who fought the President on his court plan. They are Senators Adams of Colorado, Van Nuys of Indiana, Gillette of Iowa, Longueau of Connecticut, George of Georgia, Tydings of Maryland, Smith of South Carolina, Clark of Missouri and McCarran of Nevada.

THESE WERE the Senators who, right after the collapse of the court bill, were put on the Administration black list. Journalistic spokesmen loudly called for a "party purge," which was to begin in 1938 with the elimination of the rebellious nine and be completed in 1940, when the other Democrats who refused to accept Mr. Roosevelt's orders were to be "driven out of decent politics." Just before the session closed, Senator Guffey, of Pennsylvania, fresh from a White House conference, made a sensational "party-purge" speech in which he singled out the Democratic leaders of the anti-court-packing proposals by name and in

FIVE HUNDRED REPUBLICANS HEAR SENATOR OWLETT LASH NEW DEAL AT RALLY OF LOYAL REPUBLICAN CLUB

Enthusiastic Crowd Jams Tyro Grange Hall, Buckingham, and Listens to Senator Owlett Tell of "Hypocrisy" and "Waste" of the New Dealers—Speaker Says "Economy Does Not Exist in the New Dealers' Vocabulary"—"We Don't Want Dole," Declares Senator.

"LITTLE NEW DEALERS HAVE SET UP A VICIOUS CIRCLE THAT IS MAKING THINGS UNBEARABLE IN PENNA."

By Staff Correspondent

BUCKINGHAM, Oct. 12.—Five hundred enthusiastic Republicans and their friends jammed the Tyro Grange Hall here last evening marking the opening of the campaign for the Republican candidates and the principles for which they stand. And 500 persons heard G. Mason Owlett, Pennsylvania State Senator from Tioga County, explain the New Deal in two words, "hypocrisy" and "waste."

The Republican county candidates were on hand at the meeting which was sponsored by the Loyal Republican Club of Bucks County. Edward G. Biester, of Doylestown, present Assistant District Attorney, and candidate for the office of District Attorney also addressed the assembly. Other candidates introduced by County Chairman A. Harry Clayton included: County Fire Marshal, William L. Stackhouse, of Hulmeville, candidate for Sheriff; Ezra Miller, Newtown township, candidate for Prothonotary; Raymond Mauer, Perkasio, candidate for Director of the Poor; and Lester D. Thorne, Bristol, candidate for jury commissioner.

FORMER BURGESS DIES AFTER LINGERING ILLNESS

William K. Highland Died In Wilkes-Barre Hospital On Sunday

WAS NATIVE OF BRISTOL

A former burgess of Bristol, William K. Highland, died Sunday at his home, Tunkhannock, Pa., after a lingering illness, according to word received by relatives here.

The deceased was the son of the late Eugene and Louise Highland and he died in a Wilkes-Barre hospital to which institution he was removed a few days ago.

Mr. Highland was a native of Bristol, having been born at 225 Cedar street. He resided here all his life up until the past year when he and Mrs. Highland took up their residence at Tunkhannock.

Mr. Highland was a graduate of the Bristol public schools and was employed for a time as purser on the boat operating between Trenton and Philadelphia. Later he became associated with the Bristol Patent Leather Company where he remained in an executive capacity until just a few years ago when that company ceased operations here.

Mr. Highland served as a member of Bristol Borough Council in 1904 and 1905 and was elected burgess in 1906 and served three years.

He was a member of Bristol Lodge No. 25, F. & A. M.

The survivors are his wife, and one sister, Miss Jean Highland, Bristol.

MEET TONIGHT

The business meeting of Women of the Moose Auxiliary, Chapter 753, will be held in the Moose Hall, tonight at eight. The committee has arranged a "get-acquainted" social luncheon will be served, and visiting talent will entertain.

State Senator Buckman, Bucks County, introduced Senator Owlett. Senator Buckman praised the work of the Loyal Republican Club of Bucks County. He also expressed his faith and firm belief in the Republican county ticket. Speaking of Lester Thorne, candidate for Jury Commissioner, Senator Buckman said, "Here is represented the highest type of citizenship. Mr. Thorne, who is a very busy man, yet is willing to give of his valuable time for this office—and remember, the salary for the office of jury commissioner is $100 and no expenses included. Mr. Thorne is to be highly congratulated for his decision to run for such an office, in the light of the fact that he is one of Bucks County's busiest bankers."

The Senator also praised the work of Senator Owlett since his association with him in Harrisburg six years ago. "Senator Owlett has received recognition already for his splendid record," Buckman said. "And the future will hold much more in store for him. Already he is a member of the National Republican Committee, and I will not say how far he will go in the years to come."

Senator Owlett, who made a special trip from Wilkes-Barre, where he engaged in trying a court case, praised the splendid turnout for the meeting and he also lauded the work of the Loyal Republican Club of Bucks County. "With such a fine group of men and women as I see before me tonight, there can be no doubt as to the outcome this Fall," Owlett said.

"Those of us who are still Republicans in 1937 should certainly be proud and you are to be congratulated again on sticking to your honest convictions."

"There are just two words in the dictionary that adequately and properly describe the New Dealers. And these two words are 'hypocrisy' and 'waste.' These two words explain the New Deal that descended upon us in Pennsylvania three years ago."

"They preach against Communism and you find every Communist and crack-pot theorist is on the pay-roll in Harrisburg today."

"Economy does not exist in the New Dealers' vocabulary. They never heard of it. Instead, more taxes are imposed with the result that industry after industry is being driven from this State, and likewise, the honest living of every working man and business man is being taken away, so that the New Dealers may pass out more to the henchmen of the Democratic party."

"We don't want Dole," Senator Owlett shouted. "What we in Pennsylvania and all over the United States want is the opportunity to make a living at a real job. We don't want the promise of a road job for a vote to the New Dealers. We are tired of this wasteful dole, where, for every 50 cents that actually gets to the persons who needs relief there is another 50 cents spent to pay those who administer the relief."

"Certainly, we are not opposed to relief. But we are opposed to those who administer it receiving almost half of what is appropriated for relief."

"To attain security, not by a hand-out from a politician, but by an honest

THE GREATEST DISCOVERER

Bristol today joins the rest of the country in the observance of the anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus. We can look back at him as a kind of father of everything that started on the American continent. Where would we be today if he had not performed his immortal work of exploration? Would the American continent have been discovered? Would this superb land of ours, with its teeming cities and smiling villages and magnificent scientific achievement, be still possessed by the savages?

No one can tell. At the time Columbus performed his great deed, few if any people of the old world had dreamed that any such continent existed. The narrow confines of Europe, with the portions of Africa and Asia then known, constituted the entire world to them. They conceived of our globe as a flat surface, and they never asked what was beyond those mysterious horizons into which they never dared venture. Centuries might have passed without the discovery of America, if Columbus had not lived, or if he had not dreamed his mighty dream.

What would the world be today, if America had not been discovered, or if its discovery had been postponed for many years or centuries? Certainly modern democracy and the rule of the people would not exist. Those ideas were the direct result of the free life that developed on our continent.

Without the impulse which America gave, the world would have continued to live under antiquated and outworn forms of government, in which little attention was paid to human welfare. About all the blessings of modern life, its freedom and its scientific opportunity, can be attributed to the American spirit, the beginning of which occurred when Columbus first set his foot on the unknown land of our soil.

NEW CAR TIME

There was a time, not so long ago, when more automobiles were sold in the Spring than during any other season. The auto shows held throughout the country during the Winter months attracted throngs of interested prospects, but most sales were made after Winter's driving hazards disappeared.

The automobile has ceased to be a seasonal luxury, however, and today sales of new cars are as great during the final months of the year as any other season. Motor manufacturers, in response to the new market, have advanced the auto shows several months, beginning with the New York show in October.

The new models, now being shown, should break down the sales resistance of any driver. As promoters of dissatisfaction with vintage cars, they seem to rate higher than any previous product of the auto factories.

Arbitration: A method men use to settle disputes after they have suffered enough to get the stiffness out of their necks.

Noble phrases have their uses, but few words are so rich with promise as the bitter three: "I'll show 'em."

But if ten men quit and thus throw ninety out of work, and the ten are Labor, what are the ninety?

Dear Friends:

When you are very young, the three R's are something to face nine months of the year.

Lager on, the major disturbance narrows down to four months—and it's the four months without an "R" that loom like an empty void before those adults who crave the succulent oyster. Oyster bars are multiplying now for oysters "R" in season and oyster-men pronounce them in the pink of condition — (the oysters, not the bars).

They say that it is lucky to eat oysters on the first day of their season, but actually it is lucky to eat them any time, for they not only are good, but good for you.

Oysters are packed full of healthful iodine and many valuable salts. The oyster is a veritable mine of iron, copper and manganese. Oysters are easily digested, too. Raw, they contain an abundance of the very important vitamins A, B, C and D, and vitamin G is present to a limited extent.

Although more oysters are eaten raw—on the half shell and as cocktails, than in any other way, numerous interesting and palatable methods of preparation are overlooked. Government sea-food experts have tested and approved no less than 35 ways to prepare oysters for the table—to serve them raw, stewed, broiled, roasted, baked, pan-fried, fried, grilled, scalloped or barbecued.

Creamed and served in dainty, crisp pretty shells, garnished with parsley, they are a welcome guest luncheon treat, varying the almost-inevitable creamed chicken, or grilled lamp chop made fish.

Oysters are barbecued on the half shell. The meat is sprinkled with bread crumbs, seasoned with paprika, covered with bacon (in the shells) placed under a broiler flame until the bacon is cooked through.

A chilly-weather inspiration for before-dinner appetizers is to serve raw oysters with crackers and garnishings in the living room before starting the main meal. Provide plenty of sauces and fresh horse-radish and the men will applaud the innovation.

Market authorities deplore the fact that most oysters are eaten in restaurants and speculate why the housewives pass over this food in their marketing. Bought in the shell from fish markets, the oysters easily can be opened by scrubbing well and then placing them in an oven and waiting for the shells to pop apart.

Ever try scalloped oysters with fresh or canned (cooked) sweet corn? And oyster chowder should be as staple a dish as clam chowder. Other ideas are individual oyster and shrimp pies, oyster casserole (which is delicious made with cheese), oyster loaf, and also luncheon delicacies, individual oyster and shrimp pies, and oysters scalloped with chicken.

Although the quality of oysters may change, the price usually remains fairly constant, at around 25 cents a dozen—the cost depending on the distance the oysters must travel to market and their size.

Oyster stew, prepared "half in half," is an excellent and nourishing solution for the quick noon meal for the children.

With meat prices soaring steadily, the housewife who must budget her income should welcome the nourishment, the variety and the economy which sea-food provides in the daily menu.

SUNDAY DINNER Suggestions

By ANN PAGE

GOOD food is made more appetizing by careful seasoning, which need not mean pepper and spices but imaginative use of the onion family, lemon juice and rind, celery leaves, parsley and other herbs.

Meats in general are lower but particularly forequarter beef and pork loins. Eggs are an excellent value. Fish is fairly plentiful and reasonably priced. Cheese continues to be one of the best possible values. Oysters are again in fairly general distribution.

Apples, grapes and grapefruit are the outstanding fruits though many others are generally available. Vegetables are plentiful and reasonable. Seasonable foods make up the following menus.

Low Cost Dinner
Quick Pot Roast Potatoes
Onions Carrots
Bread and Butter
Banna Bread Pudding
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner
Beefsteak Baked Potatoes
Green Beans
Bread and Butter
Spanish Cream
Tea or Coffee Milk

Very Special Dinner
Celery Carrot Sticks
Roast Turkey with Oyster Stuffing
Sweet Potatoes Brussels Sprouts
Green Salad
Rolls and Butter
Floating Island

'Chas. Ellet, Jr., Engineer and Patriot' Is Subject of Paper Read By Hugh B. Eastburn

His first work was as rodman with a surveying party on the Susquehanna. A year later he was an unpaid office and field assistant with the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal in Maryland and the next year, at nineteen, became assistant engineer at a salary of $800 a year. This was a high salary for a boy, but he gave up his position to go to France to complete his education.

He was entertained by LaFayette at LaGrange, witnessed the July revolution in Paris, attended the Ecole des Ponts et Chaussées and inspected the engineering works of Europe and England before returning to America.

After he returned home, he proposed that the government employ him to construct a suspension bridge over the Potomac; surveyed for the Utica and Schenectady railroad (1833); and located the western line of the New York and Erie. After a year as assistant, he became chief engineer of the James River and Kanawha canal in Virginia, a work intended to connect tide-water with the Ohio, and completed as far as Lynchburg before Ellet's retirement in 1839.

Ellet's plan for a suspension bridge over the Schuylkill at Fairmount was accepted over fourteen competitors and the structure, the first of its kind in the United States, was completed in 1842 at a cost of $35,000. After surveying the city and county of Philadelphia, Ellet was associated with the Schuylkill Navigation Company, directing the physical and financial reconstruction of that important carrier of anthracite coal, personally negotiating loans in Boston, New York and Europe, and participating in a bitter controversy with the Reading Railroad, the competing line.

He left the presidency of the Navigation company in 1847 to build suspension bridges of his own design over the Ohio at Wheeling and over the Niagara below the Falls. When a temporary bridge had been finished, the Niagara project was interrupted by disagreements with the directors and, after litigation, Ellet relinquished that work. In 1849, however, Westerners enthusiastically celebrated the completion of the 1010 foot span at Wheeling. Although a bitterly contested suit in the Supreme Court, brought, in the name of the State of Pennsylvania by Edwin M. Stanton, in behalf of citizens of Pittsburgh, resulted in a decree of abatement, Ellet saved his bridge by inducing Congress to declare it a post-route—only to witness its partial destruction by storm in 1854. This bridge was repaired a few years later by John A. Roebling and is still in use.

Until the eve of the Civil War, as engineer for the Virginia Central (1853-1857)—for which he built a track of unprecedented grade over the Blue Ridge—and the Hempfield (1851-55) railroads, and for the Kanawha improvement (1858), Ellet studied closely the topography and resources of Virginia.

For a quarter of a century, Ellet urged the improvement of western rivers. His Physical Geography of the Mississippi Valley (1849) was published by the Smithsonian Institution, and careful investigations, undertaken for the War Department in 1850, resulted in several reports on flood control and in his magnum opus, "The Mississippi and Ohio Rivers" (1853). Ellet considered his plan for controlling floods and improving navigation by impounding surplus waters in upland reservoirs, his great achievement; but despite his vigorous efforts, the necessary Congressional action was not taken.

It is a remarkable tribute to his engineering ability and vision that his reports were re-issued for the use of the Flood Control Committee of the 70th Congress. Truly (after the disastrous floods of the last few years), back in 1853, his seems "a voice crying in the wilderness."

Sent to Europe during the Crimean War on a financial mission for his Virginia railroads, Ellet urged on Russia a plan for the relief of Sebastopol by the use of ram-boats, and later offered to the allies, plans for the destruction of the Russian fleet. He considered his radical innovation in naval warfare of such importance that he urged it on successive Secretaries of the Navy at home, and published an exposition of it, Coast and Harbour Defenses (1855), which was widely circulated.

After 1857, Ellet lived in Washington, where he had long been well known, and from the beginning of the Civil War he devoted himself to study and exposition of military problems. Repeated offers of his services to the national and Pennsylvania and West Virginia governments were unavailing until 1862, when the Merrimac-Cumberland engagement demonstrated the efficiency of the ram. Stanton, his ancient enemy (since the Wheeling Bridge Case), now Secretary of War, hurriedly summoned Ellet and requested him to prepare a ram-fleet to clear the Mississippi. Quickly remodelling eight river boats on the Ohio, Ellet, now a Colonel in the United States Army, and responsible only to the Secretary of War, with a volunteer civilian crew, took Fort Pillow, and after sinking three Confederate boats before Memphis received the surrender of that city on June 6. Ellet was the only Union man injured. His slight wound, aggravated by his enfeebled condition, caused his death as he bled to death on shore at Cairo, June 21, 1862. He was buried with military and civic honors from Independence Hall, Philadelphia.

While this paper was being prepared,

I read an article in the current issue of the Readers Digest, by Herbert Gambrell, Associate Professor of American History, Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas. It is titled "After the Merrimac." The author states that when the news of the Merrimac's victory reached Washington, Stanton was greatly agitated; Lincoln was apprehensive; it was generally thought that the Merrimac would destroy Washington, New York and other coastal cities in the North. It is natural to suppose that some Southern naval officer knew of Ellet's ram idea, which had been ignored and unused, and applied it to the Merrimac. What satisfaction Ellet must have had in accepting Stanton's appointment, even though it was that of an army Colonel in command of a river fleet!

Charles Ellet Jr.'s nineteen year old son, Charles Rivers Ellet, was made a colonel, and the command of the fleet devolved upon his brother, Lieutenant Colonel (later Brigadier General) Alfred Washington Ellet. Ellet's wife (Elvira, daughter of Judge William Daniel, whom he had married at Lynchburg in 1837) survived him only eight days. Their son died the next year. All were buried in West Laurel Hill Cemetery, Philadelphia.

Charles Rivers Ellet received his middle name from his father as a proof of the latter's life interest. It is worth noting that both lost their lives in the service of their country on the "Father of Rivers." An interesting coincidence relates to the battle of Vicksburg. Charles Rivers Ellet and his uncle, Alfred Washington Ellet, were with the ram fleet in the attack. The city was surrendered by General Pemberton, a descendant of the Falls Township Pembertons, who had graduated from West Point and taken up the cause of the South.

His forty-six published works, as well as many technical and popular articles, attest Ellet's trenchant style, both in scientific exposition and controversial writing. His Essay on the Laws of Trade (1839), a recondite treatise on rate-making, was followed by several pioneer brochures and articles on the economics of transportation. After 1860 his contributions to English and American periodicals reveal a grasp of political and military problems, which led him to consider establishing a newspaper in Washington. Scathing criticism of McClellan's competency, volunteer advice to Lincoln and his cabinet on the conduct of the war, and articles on the strategy of various Union generals, made him a conspicuous, although not always a popular, figure in Washington.

Although his extraordinary talents were widely appreciated, Ellet had a few warm friends. His reserved—almost haughty—manner, his austere integrity, and the uncompromising logic with which he combatted opposition, made him a singularly lonely figure, and perhaps account for his almost incredible activity.

He was a man of striking appearance; his strongly marked features and meticulous manners attracted attention in any crowd. Over six feet tall and slender, he was never robust, and after 1840 his health was always precarious. He drove himself to tremendous physical as well as mental exertion, frequently writing continuously eight or ten hours, or spending all day in the saddle. It was not unusual for him to supervise simultaneously two or three important engineering undertakings, while he made plans for another project, engaged in a law-suit, participated in a newspaper controversy, or prepared a book for the publisher.

Long before his death, Ellet was recognized at home and abroad as one of the great engineers of his epoch, but his death, coming as it did in the midst of the Civil War, was almost unnoticed. However, his name will receive belated recognition from the country for which he labored and died, when the Destroyer 398 is launched and christened "Ellet" at New York, on November 1st next, by Miss Elvira D. Cabell, a granddaughter.

In closing, I wish to express my thanks to Professor Herbert Gambrell, who aroused my interest in Charles Ellet, Jr., several years ago and who has since supplied me with much of the material in this paper, and who has permitted me to quote from his sketch of Ellet published in the Dictionary of American Biography.

turn was lashed by them until he writhed in inarticulate pain. All the "inner-circle" boys, with the exception of the amiable and astute Mr. Farley, were insistent upon the "purge," and before the President started West it was accepted—and proclaimed by his friends—that one of his main purposes was to "turn the heat on" the Senators who had fought him and demonstrate the truth of his oft-repeated contention that the people were with him in his move to pack the court and the opposing Senators did not on this issue represent the real desires of their constituencies.

IT NOW SEEMS that the President was wrong—that the Senators who fought his bill had the people of their States with them; that any effort to penalize them because of their stand on the court bill will not find popular support. It is one of the paradoxes of politics that on a trip which seemed to prove that personally he is almost as popular as ever, it simultaneously should be demonstrated that the most vital and far-reaching measure of his Administration, the one in which he had the greatest personal interest and to pass which he exerted every ounce of power he had, should be deeply repugnant to the people as a whole. Yet, that became so clear on the President's tour that no one mistook it. Friendly as well as unfriendly correspondents agreed that the rebellious Senators had not been hurt. On the contrary, there is reason to believe that, despite the White House bitterness toward them, these anti-court-packing Democratic Senators actually strengthened themselves politically by their course.

AT ANY RATE, since the return of the President the "purge" has been called off. This does not mean that the White House has forgiven the Senators who stood against the President or that opposition candidates to them in the primaries next spring will not have White House good wishes and covert support. What it does mean, however, is that the original idea of Mr. Guffey and others that next year the above-mentioned nine Senators were to be singled out for political destruction and that in the name of the President, his friends would be called upon to vote against them because they had thwarted his plans for "Reforming the Judiciary"—that idea is dead. There will be no "party purge"—at least on that score. Nor will there be any effort in the next session to revive the court-packing bill. Before the President started West, both the purge and the revival were definitely planned. They now have been definitely abandoned. Undoubtedly, the unsavory disclosures concerning Justice Black played a part in this, but even had the truth concerning him not come out, the result would have been the same. The people, for illogical and emotional reasons, may still be with Mr. Roosevelt personally, but they are not with him in his designs on the court—and never were.

Grounded Zeppelin Proves Big Attraction

When the LZ-130 soars on toward New York, it will be not only helium-filled but will carry the latest constructional innovations as yet achieved by airship science.

To counterbalance the disadvantages of helium, which is expensive and has less lifting power, German airship constructors grappled with the problem in two ways: They sought to reduce the weight of the airship proportionately and devised means to conserve helium in the zeppelin envelope as long as possible.

For example, two tons of weight have been saved in construction of the LZ-130 rudder and similar deductions were achieved in the building of other important parts without in the least detracting from the constructional safety of the ship. Storage room for mail and freight has been reduced to the more necessary proportions in favor of space for passenger quarters.

To avoid the loss of helium in landing operations (ordinarily ten per cent) zeppelin engineers have improved to astounding lengths the apparatus for acquiring from moisture and rain sufficient water ballast enroute to reduce to the lowest amount possible the quantitative loss of helium during landings. Captain von Schiller, who commanded the Graf, has been appointed successor to the late Captain Lehmann as technical director for the zeppelin concern. He will probably be aboard the LZ-130 on her maiden flight to New York with the expectation that Captain von Wittenman, another airship veteran, be placed in active command of the new ship.

BENSALEM-FALLSINGTON PLAYERS FAIL TO SCORE

By Louis Tomlinson
CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Oct. 12.—Miss Smith's Bensalem hockey team failed to their second scoreless deadlock here yesterday in a Conference game against Fallsington.

Although they held their own against a stronger Fallsington eleven, the Owlets did not have the scoring punch to push over the necessary tally. The game was evenly contested with both sides showing good form on both the defense and offense.

Bensalem's halfback, Sugden, Stenberg, and Hinkle, were outstanding on the defense; while several of the Blue and Gray line lasses stood out on the offense.

WRESTLING BOUTS ARE TO BE HELD TONIGHT

TRENTON, Oct. 12.—The weekly wrestling show at the Arena will be held tonight instead of the usual Wednesday evening. Promoter Johnny Ipp explained that it was impossible for him to secure a top-notch card for Wednesday and rather than run a mediocre card he arranged for a stellar attraction for Tuesday.

The windup will feature Dean Detton, former world's champion and one of the classiest grapplers in the game, opposed to rowdy Rudy Dusek, eldest and roughest of the Omaha tribe of grapplers. It will be a one fall to a finish contest and brings together two of the foremost contestants in the sport.

Both men are classed among the leading contenders for titular honors and a defeat is something that both men will strive their mightiest to avoid.

An outstanding supporting set of matches will precede the main event. Karl Davis, burly southerner, who manhandled Carol LaRue last week, much to the dissatisfaction of the fans, returns against George Kondylas, be-mustached Greek, who has never been defeated at the Arena.

Rebel Rob Russel, one of the foremost newcomers in the game, makes his debut against Sammy Menacher, Bronx Hebrew, who fought a sensational bout two weeks ago against Bobby Roberte.

Abe Kashey, beetle-browed Syrian Assassin, and one of the most disliked grapplers ever to appear here, faces Irish Jack Kennedy, one of the classiest youngsters in the business.

The first bout will start at 8.30 p. m. Courier classified advertisements bring instant results. Those who use them will confirm this statement.

WOMAN'S LEAGUE TO CONDUCT HORSE SHOW

The Woman's League, of Mount Holly, has decided upon Saturday, October 23, as the date for the charity horse show to be held at Willitt D. Shinn's Hollyford Farm, Marne Highway, Mount Holly.

Members of the Woman's League, one of the most active organizations in Burlington county and sponsors of the Visiting Nurse and other charitable activities, are managing the entire show. They announce that they will offer handsome trophies for each event, arrange for parking space reservations and erect lunch and refreshment stands for the accommodation of the spectators and contestants. Two years ago this same group assisted Mr. Shinn in putting on an autumn show at the same place, that was very successful, both financially and as a sporting proposition, and this year these energetic women will manage the entire affair and receive all proceeds of the event.

Robert C. Shinn, secretary of the Burlington County Horse and Hound Association, has agreed to act in the capacity of secretary and the women are asking all owners and lovers of the horse to assist them in making the show a success.

In an effort to have the largest attendance that ever enjoyed a Burlington county show, they have announced that all children will be admitted free, parking space will be free.

Responsive to the desire of the public for an early dinner, the show will be started at 12 o'clock and the program should be completed before 4.30.

The League announces a program of fourteen events, including classes for three and five-gaited horses, jumpers, green hunters over a new outside course, touch-and-out, ladies' saddle horses, fine harness horses, driving teams, ladies' horsemanship and a handy-hands class for juveniles. One of the three-gaited classes and the ladies' horsemanship class will be limited to Burlington county to protect the local contingent, and an added class for bare-back riders is under consideration.

RECS TO PRACTICE TONIGHT

The Bristol Recs football team will hold a special practice tonight at the practice field on Taylor street to get in shape for the game with Port Richmond club on Sunday. All players are requested to put in an appearance.

Ram and Panther Stars

The University of Pittsburgh is out to avenge a tie game in the 1936 season which Fordham inflicted on the great Rose Bowlers. Michelosen and Stapulis, are veteran backs and Souchak, a strong wingman. Fordham has lost some of their power by graduation but Franco, an outstanding tackle, and Woitkoski, a shifty back, are leaders on this year's hard-driving team.

HIGH SCHOOL J. V. WIN OVER TRENTON ELEVEN

By "Herm" Corn

The hard-driving Jay Vee Red and Gray team of Bristol High, engaging in their first contest of their current football season, completely outplayed, outclassed, and outmanned, the Cardinal and Black Jay-Vees of Trenton High to the tune of 7-0.

The Juenger-men started off with the whistle in the initial period when they obtained possession of the pigskin and carried it well down into Trenton's territory. Here, however, the boys from New Jersey tightened up their pass defence and there prevented a score.

This type of play lasted throughout the game. First it was Bristol's ball, then Trenton's. Finally the Bunnies, with one minute to play for the end of the game, scored a touchdown and settled the matter.

After battling to a scoreless tie for the first three periods of the fray, Bristol let loose their power and drove down the field from their own 35, chalking up one first down after another until the Cardinal and Black's 20 yard marker where they lost possession of the ball on downs. This did not last for long as they later were able to block a kick, deep in their opponents' region. From here they were able to score within 4 plays.

On a reverse from the 20 yard stripe, Hardy Johnson, veteran varsity player and new addition to this year's team, was handed the pigskin and was able to hit the right side of the line for 8 yards. Again attempting this same feat but on the left side, Mat Braggs ripped up 10 yards to put the ball only two yards from victory. With the oval so close to the pay-off line, the locals were not able to cross the tape in their first attempt but were successful in their second, where Mat Braggs, shifty Soph halfback, sliced off his own left tackle through a beautiful hole and broke over the goal unmolested. "Bud" Carter, place-kicked the extra point after the regular playing time had ended. Final score: Bristol J. V. 7; Trenton J. V. 0.

Five Hundred Republicans Hear Senator Owlett Lash New Deal at Rally

determination to work and do something that will benefit society, that alone is our desire.

"The Little New Dealers have set up a vicious circle that is making things unbearable in Pennsylvania. Pennsylvania is losing her industries. They are moving to other States where taxes are reasonable. Many new industries are starting in New Jersey because they know they will not be taxed to death. And do you know that there is very little unemployment in New Jersey?" the Senator asked.

"It is only because of our unfair laws that such a condition can exist. And were you aware, that for the first time in the history of the Commonwealth, it will take two volumes to house all the laws that were passed at the last session?"

"And did you know that under the new Teachers Tenure Act a teacher cannot be discharged for teaching your children and my children Communism? Or were you aware that the same act will protect alien teachers to the same extent that it does United States Citizens?"

Speaking of the court packing situation that has arisen Owlett pointed out that "we do not have to go to Washington to see this thing at work. We have the very same procedure here in Pennsylvania.

"If there is anything that is un-American it is the set-up of some of these New Deal boards. There is no impartiality. In some cases persons are taken for hundreds of miles before boards in another section of the country where there is no chance for them to get their rights. And now Mr. Roosevelt wants to pack the Supreme Court. My advice to you is to go home and read the first 12 Amendments to the Constitution and learn that you still should have some rights.

"Government in many foreign countries is just one step removed beyond that of this country today. If we stand for our own rights we are condemned by the New Dealers. But we must stand firm. It is the duty of every conscientious and right-minded citizen to fight this one-man rule.

"The New Deal pretends to be the friend of the working man. Now let me ask you what other country in the world has done half as much for the working man as has the United States over the years? Yet the New Dealers would have us believe that they are responsible for everything that has happened for the benefit of the working class."

Striking at the merger of the Pennsylvania State Police with the Highway Patrol Owlett said that formerly the State Police was one of the finest of its kind in the country. "They were respected and feared and obeyed. But then John L. Lewis didn't like them around his strike areas so they were merged.

"Dictator Guffey and his little George Earle came upon us three years ago. For three years we have been suffering as never before in our history. For three years we have seen Earle attempt to imitate everything that Roosevelt has done in Washington. Yes, for three years, everytime Mr. Roosevelt coughed we have found Mr. Earle sneezing!

"To come back to just one example of the waste in our State government since Earle came in let us look at the results of the Anthracite Commission that he appointed. It cost us just $50,000 to find out that larceny is illegal!"

In concluding his address Senator Owlett urged, "We must take the power from these puppets in Harrisburg and restore it to the God-fearing people of the State. The issues are serious and we must succeed this Fall to pave the way for an overwhelming victory next year."

Former United States Senator Joseph R. Grundy also addressed the group briefly. He praised the work of the Loyal Republican Club. He also stated that he agreed with the address of Senator Owlett.

Mr. Grundy pointed out that this year we are devoting our time to electing the local officers and county officers and he urged a systematic plan on the part of the workers to see that the voters get out.

Seated on the stage of the hall were all the Republican county candidates. The stage, decorated in ferns and palms with Fall foliage and large baskets of dahlias, made a very pretty appearance. Seated directly in front of the stage was the Doylestown High School Band of 40 pieces. The band rendered many fine selections during the minutes preceding the meeting.

Edward "Ted" Watson opened the meeting and asked the group to join in the singing of America. Following this Mr. Watson introduced the president of the Loyal Republican Club, Mr. Kulp. A. Harry Clayton, county chairman, was the next to be introduced. He praised the work of the Club and presented the county candidates.

Lester D. Thorne, Republican candidate for jury commissioner, was the first to be introduced. The Bristol banker read a letter to the group in which a customer answered his banker and explained why he could not meet his note. The customer explained that he had been held up, robbed, beaten, inspected, discussed, taxed, supplicated for money for every known cause, taxed some more, squeezed, and handled so much that the only reason he was hanging on was to see what in the World would come next.

Raymond D. Mauer, Perkasio, candidate for Director of the Poor, was next presented by Mr. Clayton. In speaking of the term used by the New Dealers in describing Bucks County as the Jericho with the high walls Mr. Mauer said, "It is a Jericho, but a modern Jericho. It is, referring to Bucks County, a place where all can have plenty and where there need be little want if we stop this waste and elect those men who have the interests of their fellow men at heart."

Introducing Ezra Miller, Newtown Township, candidate for Prothonotary, Mr. Clayton said, "that for 22 years Mr. Miller has been a civic minded citizen of Newtown Township where he resides. He is interested in various public and civic affairs and he has identified himself with numerous projects that had to do with the betterment of the community in which he lives. He has been active in the Newtown Grange and the Inter-State Milk Producers' Association. He has been a director of the Newtown Cooperative Association since its incorporation in 1922. And for 20 years he has been a school director, serving two terms as President of the Bucks County School Directors' Association."

Miller responded by stating, "It is a treat to be before such a fine crowd and I am confident of the results which will be attained in November." William L. Shackhouse, Hulmeville, candidate for Sheriff, said that he was highly honored by having such a fine group of men on the ticket with him.

District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn was introduced to the audience. In introducing Edward Biester, candidate for the office held by Mr. Eastburn, the present District Attorney said, "Ed Biester has everything that a District Attorney needs. He can be firm when firmness is needed and he can be sympathetic when sympathy is needed. He will handle the job without fear or favor to anyone."

Mr. Biester praised the work of the Loyal Republican Club and pointed out that in January there were only 14 members where today there are more than 400 members. "Such a club," Biester said, "is an example of the Republican rejuvenation in Bucks County."

"The only promise that I can make to you is that I will try to emulate my chief, Arthur Eastburn. He has ability and integrity and they are the essential characteristics."

Biester also stated that he was pleased to have such a fine group of candidates running with him. He also praised the loyalty of the defeated

Republican aspirants for nomination at the primary.

"We have the type of electorate that approves of good work done. The New Deal, in no place, stands for economy in government. We believe that to spend the least you need, to spend it wisely, and to use good business methods is what the electorate wants and this is our aim." Biester said.

In closing Biester remarked, "Don't depend too much on the registration. It never elected anyone. No Republican ever voted who didn't come to the polls. It is your privilege to run up a comfortable margin. It will be up to you, the individual worker, to see that this margin is attained."

Mr. Watson closed the meeting and asked the audience to join in the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

To Erect Water Tank For 500,000 Gals. At Green Lane

"We took fire tests in all sections of the borough," stated Mr. Boardman and found some very serious defects. With the erection of the storage tank you will be able to operate your pumps at ordinary speed and will not be forced to break them down in operating them at a speed which will enable you to meet the peak demands."

Burgess Clifford L. Anderson and President of Council Dr. J. Fred Wagner questioned Mr. Boardman who replied that "all of the engineers were in accord that something should be done to meet the demands."

Burgess Anderson brought out the fact that in view of the recommendation of the engineers and the Philadelphia Suburban Fire Underwriters' Association that if council failed to act, it could be rightly and justly accused of dereliction of duty and failure to meet the responsibility of their office.

President Wagner asked that the matter be freely discussed and that questions be asked, which was done.

With the erection of the new tank of 500,000 gallons and the storage in the present tank of 171,000 gallons, engineers figure that Bristol will be prepared to meet the demands for possibly the next 15 or 20 years.

There will be a pressure of approximately 74 pounds at the base of the tank.

Council voted unanimously in favor of the project and adopted a resolution that the proper officers of the borough should advertise for bids.

It will only be necessary to lay about 200 feet of new mains to connect the proposed tank with the present water distribution system. It was stated in answer to a question by President Wagner. The pressure in the Harriman section and in fact on all sections of the system will be materially increased.

Police committee reported eight arrests during September. Five were discharged, two fined and one held for court. Two arc and six incandescent lights were reported out during the month.

Sewing project reported 1,293 garments distributed through borough council; 577 through the Red Cross and 18 to the nursery school.

Council was asked to make a $100 contribution to the Bucks County Crime Laboratory. The request was referred to police committee for investigation with power to act. The Laboratory plans to aid all communities in the scientific solution of crimes in the county.

Councilmen absent were: Winter, Williams, Wichser, Fallon, DeGroot and Conklin.

Wildcats at Bay

By BURNLEY

As the 1937 gridiron campaign gets under way in earnest, the eyes of the football world are focused on the defending champions of the various conferences.

Last year's sectional and conference titleholders included Northwestern, Big Ten leaders; Pittsburgh, Eastern kingspin; Washington, Coast champs; Louisiana State, tops in the Southeastern Conference; Duke, Southern Conference rulers; Nebraska, Big Six big shots; and Arkansas, supreme in the Southwest.

How many of these sectional leaders will stay on top this year? The chances are that there won't be more than a couple of repeaters in the bunch—football fortunes shift with such rapidity.

Of all the defending champs, none will face a tougher task to retain their laurels than Northwestern.

Larry Lynn Waldorf, familiarly known as "Fat," did a superb job in lifting the Wildcats to the heights last season, topping mighty Minnesota from the Big Ten throne. This year the Gophers loom as menacing as ever in the path of Evanston's champs, and the Bierman bunch will be out for sweet revenge.

Purdue, Wisconsin, Ohio State and possibly Michigan all have designs on the Wildcats' championship, so Northwestern will have to be even better than in 1936 to repeat.

Waldorf has a well-balanced 1937 line-up, featuring two veteran backfield aces, Dashing Don Heap and Bob "Streaky" Swisher. The Wildcats are baring their fangs!

THE HOME DECORATOR

Furniture—New for Old

Of course you have your well-loved pieces of furniture—the cherry bureau and the lovely walnut table—that you've had since you and George were married. But you probably have some well-loved pieces, too. The old bookcase that's threatened to fall down for many a moon... the chair that you have to yell "Be careful!" over... the old table that's about as smooth as the gravel in the driveway. You can't get rid of 'em, so why not put in a little less effort than pure hate and fix 'em up?

Of course, no amount of enamelling is going to keep the chair from falling down. But once you fix it (probably all it needs is a little glue), enamel's going to make a new chair out of it. And what's more you can make it any color you like.

Start around now with a mental notebook. Stick out your tongue at every single piece you've heartily disliked for years and say with a sneer, "I know what's going to happen to you!" Then, spread out newspapers in the basement. Get George to carry every stick down there. A few nails and a little glue judiciously used will make everything sturdy enough to hold your fat-test Aunt.

You're ready to paint! Turn the chair upside down and paint it nethermost first. Then, right side up, the job is soon finished. Let it dry thoroughly. Then paint in the trim on knobs and turns. But be sure the body color is dry first. A good quick-drying enamel will be hard enough to use in from four to six hours. And just as you painted the underside of the chair first, paint the bottoms of bookcase shelves and tables before you paint the tops.

You can do a whole of a lot of redecorating in no time and without putting out enough to dent the family budget... and you'll find that those old pieces are now among the shining and new and well-loved.
